"The short version of the story is that the PING i20 driver is now the #1 Driver in our review database, and that's pretty damn impressive. We do believe that the majority of golfers would probably be better served by PING's G20 driver - especially if you're wise enough to place a premium on fairways.

After my swing came back, I was bombing the i20 again. I found that on average for 18 holes I would hit 12 awesome drives and 2 so-so drives. I think it was mostly based on the swing, but the i20 is not as forgiving for poor swings like the g20 is. The best part of the i20 is the solid feel. It might be the best feeling/sounding driver right now.

I'm surprised that the stock length of the i20 driver is only 45.25" in a world of 45.5-45.75 standard lengths these days--and in my view a major marketing glitch on the part of Ping. Obviously longer lengths are available, but with a 204 gram head weight and already D-3, adding 1/4" or more to a stock i20 is not that feasible due to ...
